We have some of the most talented

Congratulations to them all!

Junior, Anthony Howard was chosen to represent CMSA at this year's Illinois Music Education Association (ILMEA) Festival Competition on November 12, 2015 at Elmhurst College. Anthony is one only 60 from the 2,000 students who auditioned for this honor to perform in this prestigious festival. Anthony's instrument the tuba, is technically demanding. It is considered a scholarship instrument due to its technical difficulty. By playing the tuba so well Anthony will have access to scholarships for his college education. Playing in the Festival offers these students, who normally would not play together, the chance to experience a professional level of collaboration they will always remember. The concert also gives them a chance to shine before college music directors in the audience interested in recruiting talent. In addition, after his performance at University of Illinois at Chicago Band Festival he was accepted to the prestigious UIC Honors Band. He was also given the first chair position (This means Anthony is a premier musician and will be seated closest to the audience leading the other instruments, plus he will be playing any solos!) and received compliments from world renowned composer Brian Balmages. Well done, Anthony!

Her presentation is possible through our partnership with Morningstar. Their mentors joined their students to discuss how their college applications are progressing and Hanna's useful tips.
